MADISON COUNTY.

Mesars, Edilors: Perhaps a letter from this section may not prove enlinteresting to the readers of the Democrat. We have been to Madison county several days, have been over the greater portion of it, and the farmers inform us that the corn crops are better this, than for many years previous. Some fields will yield from liteen to accept the first of the farmers inform us that the corn crops are better this, than for many years previous. Some fields will yield from liteen to seventeen barrels perace. But it is feared that, it it contines to rain as it has for the past month, the corn will rot in the field. Heavy rains have fallen here nearly every day for two weeks. The creeks and branches have been full, and the Kentucky river was at a higher stage of water than it has been covered with excellent grass, and stock look to be in exter equalition here than the second of the stering and particulated to this behave. Lonisville, we hope, will get the onlive time of the completed to this behave. Lonisville, we hope, will get the onlive time of the towns in the county, would find it to their interest—so would the shippers of stock—to go to Lonisville, which is as good a market as could be found in the two stages of the county. A railroad is something the people of Madison have long the more country. A railroad is something the people of Madison have long as they have a railroad in process, which will be finished in two or three months, we see nothing to prevent Richmond from becoming a city of considerable—unsignitude. Madison is a wealthy county, and Lonisville should, by all means, secure the trade of this county, which will be finished in two or three months, we see nothing to provide that they shall be paid in the large of the covernment, and the provide that they shall be paid in the stage of the finished in two or three months, we see mothing to provide that they shall be paid in the stage of the finished in two or three months, we see mothing to provide that they shall be paid in the stage of the finished in two

He went to San Francisco In 1850, and immediately legan business as a merchant, importing teas, opinn, silk and lacquered goods, Chinese groceries, &e., extensively, and soon built np a large wholesale and retail trade, which extended over a large part of California and the Pacitic coast, and has continued and invested for his correct business habits, strict probity and honor, and politic and courteons manner. The Alta California says of him:

"Intelligent and highly educated in his own lunguage and literature, hospitable and charitable, he was respected by all classes, and the lucan prejudice of coste and race, never displayed by him, was seldome exhibited towards him by any one inour community. He was particularly noted for his liberality towards claritable objects. During our civil war he gave liberally towards the sanitary relief tund, and was thanked therefor by Father Bellows, in a special letter from New York. When the great Sacramento thool of 1861-2 brought decolation and distress to so many American households, his liberality was manifested towards for heart of the Democratic party. It was passed a great for the past, and that, if for he safety of the nation, to come with the ranks of the Democratic party. He was particularly noted for his his problem of the safety of the nation, to come with and the reins of government from the his own later. The Alta California says of him:
